

Hybrid Advanced Trauma Life Support® (ATLS)

The ATLS course prepares a physician to manage a trauma, the leading cause of death in the first four decades of life in the United States. Fifty million injuries occur annually in the United States, and ten million of these are disabling. The ATLS® course reviews the initial assessment and management of severe injuries, which ultimately influence the patient's outcome. Specific knowledge of basic treatment principles for various injury types (such as head, chest, abdominal or spinal) can significantly reduce the morbidity and mortality of trauma. The materials and presentations used in the West Michigan ATLS® course, provider and instructor level, conform with national standards established by the American College of Surgeons (ACS) and the ACS Michigan Committee on Trauma.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

The Advanced Trauma Life Support® course will prepare the participant to:

- Demonstrate concepts and principles of patient assessment
- Establish management priorities in a trauma
- Initiate primary and secondary management necessary within the first hour of trauma
- Demonstrate the skills necessary in initial management of trauma victims

The ATLS® course is composed of a series of Interactive discussions and interactive skills sessions. Each topic builds around patient cases. Testing includes written examinations and performance at practical skills stations.
